They Bring Rescue to Boy Who to Sea.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Norfolk, Va., August 12.—The bravery of two women horseback riders probably saved Willie Legum, fourteen years old, from drowning at Virginia Heach late this afternoon. The boy had built a raft of two logs, and a couple of boards, from which he rode the breakers and dived. A stiff wind from the shore and the strong tide carried the raft into deep water before the lad realized what had happened. It was too far for him to swim ashore, so he set up a yell that immediately get attention, but no rescuers. There was a throng on the bathing beach, but none dared to risk his life to save the boy. Meantime, he was being swept further and further from shore.

Two dashing girls on horseback rode up and in an instant sized up the situation. They galloped at full speed to the life-guard and life-savers a mile away, and the men dashed through the billows, swam to the raft and brought telad ashore, while the multitude roared in applause. Women were particularly anxious to shake hands with the rescuers and pat them on the shoulders in affectionate appreciation of their bravery.
